Jan. 25 Five Circulations and Six Qi in TCM (Chinese)
中醫五運六氣

Five Circulations and Six Qi (FCSQ) is one of the TCM theories from Yellow Emperor's Classic. There were 7 great articles in Yellow Emperor's Classic which especially discussing how five circulations and six qi were formed and how they impact human being's body and cause various diseases. It also includes how to predict the long term weather changes and its influence to human being's health. FCSQ is a very sophisticated system of ancient Chinese medicine, because of its ancient terms, modern people are hard to understand its meanings and hard to apply it on the clinic practice. This course is going to introduce the usual terms of FCSQ, explain their meanings, and introduce the calculation methods of FCSQ. A brief introduction of clinic application of FCSQ will also be offered.

Dr. Jiang earned his Master of Arts degree from East China Normal University in ancient Chinese culture and classics. He has been teaching Chinese classics and culture for more than 30 years. Now, he is also a licensed acupuncturist and works for Alhambra Medical University as the academic dean. Medical I Ching is one of his famous classes which have been offered to the students of Emperor's College, Yo San University, South Baylo University and the acupuncturist of San Diego Acupuncture Association.
